TRANSPORTATION

El Paso International Airport is served by American, Continental, Frontier, Southwest, and Texas International airlines, through connecting points at Denver, Dallas, and Houston. Southwest Airlines offers low-cost fares ($60 and $80 one way) to most major cities in the Southwest, from San Diego in the west to New Orleans in the east. Other airlines also offer special discount fares. The airport is located on the east side, about 5 minutes from the Ramada Inn and 20 minutes drive from the downtown area. Most motels offer free airport pickup service. Cabfare to the downtown area or the university is expensive. All major car rental companies have outlets near the airport and car rental rates are often lower on the weekends for those who plan to do some touring.

AMTRAK has a three-times a week service through El Paso from connecting points at New Orleans (via San Antonio) and Los Angeles (via Phoenix and Tucson). The terminal is on the edge of the downtown area. Greyhound and Trailways also have terminals in the downtown area, within walking distance of the motels.

Flights to the interior of Mexico are available from El Paso International Airport (to resort areas such as Mazatlan, Puerto Vallarta, Cabo San Lucas, Ixtapa, etc.) and to major cities in Mexico from the Juarez Airport (via Aeromexico). Rail and bus service is available to the interior of Mexico. See a travel bureau for detailed information.

THE UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS AT EL PASO

The University of Texas at El Paso (UTEP) is located in a series of small foothills just one mile northwest of the downtown area. The campus overlooks the Rio Grande river and the international boundary, which runs only a few hundred yards west of campus and Interstate 10. The campus is noted for its distinctive Bhutanese architecture, a theme which has been carried over into the newest campus buildings. Originally UTEP was founded as the Texas School of Mines in 1913 as part of the University of Texas system. In 1949 it was renamed Texas Western College because of its broadened academic program and in 1967 it acquired its present name. Today it is an institution of 15,000 students and a wide variety of academic programs. A large number of foreign students from Mexico, Central and South America, the Middle East and Far East add to the international flavor of the campus. A small group of German students who are dependents of military personnel are enrolled in a special program that grants the equivalent of an Abitur. The university is particularly strong in areas such as geology, chemistry, metallurgy, engineering, nursing, as well as traditional academic fields such as languages, linguistics, history, music, political science and English. Research on border problems, immigration, and the role of Mexican-Americans in the cultural and political life of the United States is a particular focus.

The university library contains approximately 500,000 volumes, divided between the Main Library, the Annex (science and government documents), and the Education Building. It has research collections dealing with the Southwest, Chicano history, the history of colonial Mexico, and related topics. Two collections of special interest to WAGS members are the S.L.A. Marshall collection of military history (mainly World War II) on the first floor and the Vincent Ravel collection of Judaica on the second floor (Archives and Special Collections). The university also maintains a collection of Indian and southwestern artifacts in the Centennial Museum, located on campus across from the library.

TOURIST INFORMATION

The city of El Paso is nestled at the foot of the Franklin Mountains, the southernmost tip of the Rocky Mountains. To the south it faces another chain of mountains in Mexico, and the narrow valley of the Rio Grande is what drew the earliest settlers here. The first Spanish explorers reached this area in 1581 and the original settlement on the south side of the river (now Juarez) began in 1681. The city on the north side of the river was founded in 1881 with the coming of the railroads. Since then it has grown to over 425,000, with the largest growth coming after 1950. Copper, cattle and cotton were the original industries in El Paso, but in recent years oil refineries, clothing and boot factories have added employment. Military installations at Fort Bliss and White Sands Missile Range (90 miles to the north) have also contributed to the local economy. The German Air Defense School at Fort Bliss is the largest NATO contingent here and the large German population in northeast El Paso has left its mark on the businesses and restaurants of the city. El Paso has close social and economic ties to its sister city across the Rio Grande, Ciudad Juarez. The border crossing points here are some of the busiest in the world. El Paso's climate is strongly influenced by its desert environment and relatively high altitude. In October the daytime temperatures are in the high 70s and low 80s with low humidity and bright sunshine, but nighttime temperatures are cool.

Juarez: Conference delegates are urged to visit Ciudad Juárez, Mexico, in their free time. This bustling, sprawling border city of close to 1,000,000 population has a liveliness and vitality that is characteristic of Latin America. Although too rapid growth has spoiled some of its picturesque character, islands of beauty are still to be found in its better residential districts and in the great mansions along the Sixteenth of September Avenue. Particular points of interest for tourists include the Cathedral, the Plaza, the old Customs House, the old City Market, and the nightclubs and curio shops of the old tourist district along Avenida Juarez. These areas are all within a short cabride of downtown El Paso. A newer tourist area known as the PRONAF Center has developed three miles to the east close to the Cordova Bridge. A large number of curio shops and craft stores is located there in addition to the government-run Centro Artesanal. The latter features fixed, but low prices, and authentic Mexican folk art in silver, wood, glass, textiles, copper, brass, etc. Near the PRONAF are several highly recommended restaurants. Also nearby is the somewhat hard to find Juarez Museum of Art, located in the midst of Chamizal Park. Recent devaluations of the peso have made many Mexican souvenirs bargains and have cut the cost of meals in restaurants.

Tourists driving their own cars to Juarez are cautioned that traffic is heavy, streets are narrow, and that the speed limit (60kmh/36mph) is strictly enforced. Most American insurance policies do not cover driving in Mexico unless special arrangements are made. (A tour of Juarez arranged by private firm is being offered to WAGS delegates who prefer the convenience.) United States and Canadian citizens need only proof of residence to reenter the United States; foreign visitors need a valid passport. No border formalities are required by Mexico, but tourist papers are checked at the 25 kilometer point south of Juarez. Liquor is usually a bargain in Mexico, but United States customs regulations permit each tourist to bring in no more than one quart per visit.

Surrounding Areas: For delegates with cars a number of short side trips are possible. A drive up the Mesilla Valley towards Las Cruces on back roads takes one through picturesque farming villages, fields full of cotton, chilies, onions and lettuce, pecan groves, and finally to the old village of Mesilla, New Mexico (45 miles). Mesilla has the atmosphere of a smaller Santa Fe, with a historic plaza surrounded by art galleries, craft shops, book stores, and restaurants, including the famous La Posta Inn. A drive to the lower valley of El Paso follows the trail of the old Spanish missions: Ysleta, Socorro, San Elizario, as well as the Tigua Indian community (30 miles). Longer side trips could include: Carlsbad Caverns National Park (165 miles) and White Sands National Monument (120 miles). Several national forests with thick stands of pine trees and aspen provide a striking contrast to the desert surroundings. Among the favorite spots are Cloudcroft, New Mexico (115 miles) and Ruidoso, New Mexico (145 miles) in the Lincoln National Forest and the sparser Gila Wilderness area and Gila Cliff Dwellings near Silver City, New Mexico.

Car trips into Mexico past the 25 kilometer point require a tourist permit obtainable at the Consulate General of Mexico (910 San Antonio Street, El Paso, TX 79901). Motorists need a driver's license, vehicle registration, and proof of insurance valid in Mexico. Shorter car trips to the interior include Chihuahua City and Casas Grandes. The unique canyons of the Sierra Madre (Barrancas del Cobre) can be reached by the Chihuahua al Pacifico railroad from Chihuahua City.

SPECIAL FEATURES

Dr. Fritz Cocron, Director of the Austrian Institute in New York, will be attending the Conference as an official representative of the Institute. Dr. Cocron will be available to meet with scholars to discuss research opportunities in Austria on Friday, from 2:00-3:30 p.m. in the Barry Room.

The banquet speaker is Hans Mommsen, of the Ruhr-Universität Bochum, who will speak on "History and National Identity: The Case of Germany." The luncheon speakers treat the topic of German-American relations from two perspectives. Hans-Adolf Jacobsen of the University of Bonn will address the question as seen from Germany, while Under Secretary Lawrence S. Eagleburger or his representative will provide an American outlook. Reservations are essential, because seating is limited.

The German-American textbook discussions, recently concluded, will be analyzed by Karl-Ernst Jeismann, Director of the Georg-Eckert Institute for International Textbook Research.

A panel on German studies and a discussion group on National Socialism are also scheduled.

Among the many foreign scholars present, the Association welcomes participants from the Federal Republic of Germany, the German Democratic Republic, and Austria.

Attention is directed to the movies scheduled for Thursday night, "Artisten in der Zirkuskuppel-Ratlos" by Alexander Kluge and "The Subjective Factor" by Helke Sanders.

In addition to these events, a local cinema near campus has booked two recent German feature-length films: "Mephisto," the Academy-Award winning German-Hungarian co-production, and "Das Boot," the significant film about World War II submarines. (University Cinema IV, 3233 North Mesa; telephone: 542-2868.)
